THE PIOCHE DAILY RECORD

A VERSATILE EDITION.—The following story is a good one: Newspaper disputes in the South in former days were fre-quently conducted with excessive bitterness, and often supplemented by duels between the participants. Vicksburg was noted for the number of duels between rival editors, and in several other Southern cities it became the custom to finish in the field difficulties arising from expressions of opinion in editorial col-umns. A writer in the Memphis Appeal gives an account of one of the bitterest controversies that ever took place in that city. It congred long are said arcset city. It occurred long ago, and arose from a difference of opinion in regard to a matter of purely local interest. The a matter of purely local interest. The discussion was carried on in the columns of two journals then published in that city, one edited by Mr. Bankhead and the other by Mr. Yancy. Both editors were away at the time, and each one had a substitute to fill the editorial chair during his absence. The public became greatly interested in the controversy, which became hotter and hotter during each succeeding day, and crowds daily gathered around the newspaper offices in the expectation of witnessing bloodshed the expectation of witnessing bloodshed in case the furious writers should meet. The news of what was going on reached the absent editors, and they hurried home, each thinking their substitute was in danger of his life. They found popular excitement at fever heat, but were relieved from all anxiety on finding that, unknown to each other, they had engaged the same man to officiate in their ab-sence—an able and enterprising young lawyer—who had been conducting both sides of the controversy with a degree of vigor only equaled by his impartiality. It is needless to say that no duel grew out of that controversy.

The Old South Church Boston, which narrowly escaped destruction by the recent fire, is, doubtless, the most noted church edifice in the United States. The Old South Society was the third Congregational Society in Boston, and was organized in 1869, in consequence of ganized in 1669, in consequence of a curious theological quarrel in the First Church. The first church building of this society, was erected in 1669, stood for 60 years. It was of cedar, and it had a steeple and galleries, with the pulpit on the north side. It was taken down on the north side. It was taken down in 1729, when the present building was erected on the same spot, and religious services were held in it for the first time on the 26th of April, 1730, (O. S.) The Old South is frequently mentioned in the pages devoted to the history of Boston before and during the Revolution. In 1775 the British soldiers, eager to insult those by whom they were so cordially hated, but whom they held so completely in their power, occupied this pletely in their power, occupied this meeting-house as a riding-school and meeting-house as a riding-school and place for cavalry drill. They established a grog shop in the lower gallery, which they preserved in part for spectators of their sport. The rest of the galleries were tore down, and the whole interior was stripped of its wood work. The floor they covered with about two feet of At this time the church was without a pastor, and no new pastor was or-dained until 1779. In 1782 the building was thoroughly repaired and put in very much its present condition.
